Green Economy Program in the Philippines (GEPP)

The Philippines is no stranger to the adverse effects of climate change and vulnerability, aggravated by a nationwide waste management crisis--this puts millions of Filipinos' lives and livelihoods at stake. In an effort to offset and reverse these impacts, an economic paradigm shift in the form of circular economy becomes a promising solution.

To fully realize the positive impact of this framework, public, private, and financial sectors must all be mobilized to ensure holistic actions and approaches that will tap all socioeconomic sectors in the country.

By dividing the program in three levels, and integrating actions between implementing partner organizations, implementation becomes cross-cutting and more effective.
